10 MICHAEL ALEJANDRO MARTINEZ,
11 Petitioner,

Case No.: 3:14-cr-01857-GPC
3:16-cv-02324-GPC

12 v.

13 UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
14 Respondent.

ORDER DENYING PETITIONER'S MOTION TO VACATE OR CORRECT SENTENCE

[DKT. NO. 125.]

15
16 Michael Alejandro Martinez’s (“Petitioner”) filed a pro se motion to vacate, set 17 aside, or correct his sentence pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2255 on September 12, 2016. (Dkt.
18 No. 125 (filed nunc pro tunc).) Petitioner urges this Court to retroactively apply a two-19 point reduction to his sentence because under Amendment 794—which, passed after his 20 conviction, amended the commentary to the minor role reduction guideline in U.S.S.G.
21 § 3B1.2—he played a minor role in the drug trafficking offense for which he was 22 convicted. (Id.) The Court provisionally appointed counsel to Petitioner, and counsel 23 filed a supplemental motion on March 13, 2017. (Dkt. No. 128.) On July 7, 2017, the 24 Government filed an opposition urging the Court to deny Petitioner’s motion on the 25 merits. (Dkt. No. 136.) For the reasons set forth below, the Court DENIES Petitioner’s 26 motion to vacate or correct his sentence.
27
28

1 I. BACKGROUND

2 After a long-term investigation conducted by the U.S. Drug Enforcement 3 Administration (“DEA”) and foreign law enforcement agencies, Petitioner and his uncle, 4 David James Martin, were charged with conspiracy to distribute 500 grams or more of 5 methamphetamine and 1 kilogram or more of heroin, in violation of federal law.¹ On 6 October 21, 2014, Petitioner plead guilty to Count 1 of the Indictment.² (Dkt. Nos. 42, 7 43.) On August 14, 2015, this Court held a sentencing hearing. Relevant to the current 8 proceeding, the Court rejected Petitioner’s request for a minor-role adjustment under 9 USSG § 3B1.2. The Court pointed to the facts that (1) Petitioner had shipped “on 10 multiple occasions multi-kilograms of methamphetamine, and then was observed [with] 11 or possessed a briefcase with the 3.5 kilograms of methamphetamine and 1.4 kilograms 12 of heroin that were going to be also shipped”; (2) Petitioner was “also involved in money 13 pickups in 2012”; (3) after certain seizures of narcotics, Petitioner spoke on the telephone 14 with other co-conspirators about the seizures; and (4) Petitioner’s involvement in the 15 drug-trafficking organization spanned a significant amount of time. (Sent. Tr. at 21–22.) 16 Based on those facts, the Court concluded that Petitioner understood that the “scope and 17

18 ¹ Recounted in more detail in the Government’s opposition, “the investigation . . .
19 revealed that through approximately May 2014, co-defendant Martin, and his nephew—20 [Petitioner]—among others, were members of a drug transportation organization 21 (“DTO”) contracted by other drug traffickers to smuggle multi-kilogram quantities of 22 methamphetamine (and heroin, on at least one occasion) from Mexico to various 23 locations, to include through the United States (investigators believe the drugs entered the 24 United States through the San Ysidro Port of Entry) and onward to East Asia.” (Dkt. No.
25 136 at 2.)

26 ² Count 1 of the Indictment charged that Petitioner did “willfully, knowingly and 27 intentionally combine, conspire, confederate and agree with other persons known and 28 unknown to distribute 500 grams and more of a mixture and substance containing a detectable amount of methamphetamine, a Schedule II Controlled Substance, and distribute 1 kilogram and more of a mixture containing a detectable amount of heroin, a Schedule I Controlled Substance.” (Dkt. No. 43 at 1-2.)

1 structure of the criminal activity was significant” and that Petitioner’s role was “greater 2 than that of a mere courier.” (Id. at 22.) The Court ultimately sentenced Petitioner to 60 3 months custody, 5 years of supervised release, no fine, and a $100 special assessment.
4 (Dkt. No. 106.) Petitioner did not file a direct appeal of his sentence.

5 On November 1, 2015—approximately two weeks after Petitioner began his 6 sentence—the United States Sentencing Commission put into effect Amendment 794, 7 which amended the commentary to the minor role reduction guideline at U.S.S.G. § 8 3B1.2. See U.S.S.G. § 3B1.2, comment, n. 3(c) (2015). “The Commission did so 9 because, after conducting an independent review, it found that minor role reductions were 10 being ‘applied inconsistently and more sparingly than the Commission intended.’” 11 United States v. Quintero-Leyva, 823 F.3d 519, 522 (9th Cir. 2016). The amendment 12 provides a non-exhaustive list of factors a court should consider in determining whether 13 to apply the minor role reduction. U.S.S.G. § 3B1.2, comment, n. 3(c) (2015).³ The 14 amendment did not change the text of § 3B1.2; it is contained wholly in Application Note 15 3(C).

16 In response to this amendment and a subsequent Ninth Circuit ruling, Petitioner 17 filed a motion to vacate or correct his sentence pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2255 on 18

19 ³ These factors are:

- 20 (i) the degree to which the defendant understood the scope and structure of 21 the criminal activity; (ii) the degree to which the defendant participated in 22 planning or organizing the criminal activity; (iii) the degree to which the 23 defendant exercised decision-making authority or influenced the exercise of 24 decision-making authority; (iv) the nature and extent of the defendant’s 25 participation in the commission of the criminal activity, including the acts 26 the defendant performed and the responsibility and discretion the defendant 27 had in performing those acts; and (v) the degree to which the defendant 28 stood to benefit from the criminal activity.

U.S.S.G. § 3B1.2, comment, n. 3(c) (2015). The determination is “based on the totality of the circumstances” and “heavily dependent upon the facts of the particular case.” Id.

1 September 15, 2016. (Dkt. No. 125.) Petitioner seeks retroactive application of 2 Amendment 794 to his sentence and contends that in light of the amendment’s language, 3 his role in the offense was minor. (Id. at 4-5.) He cites to his short-term role in the 4 trafficking organization, limited role as a driver as opposed to an organizer, lack of 5 decision-making authority, and the fact that he was never paid for his activities. (Id. at 4-6 5.)

7 In the Government’s opposition, it argues that Petitioner’s intimate role in the 8 conspiracy, the amount of drugs involved, the sophistication required for international 9 drug trafficking, and Petitioner’s direct involvement with the drug trafficking 10 organization—including packaging and shipping drugs internationally, laundering 11 money, and communicating with co-conspirators—all preclude him from receiving a 12 minor role reduction. (Dkt. No. 136 at 7-10.)

13 II. LEGAL STANDARD

14 28 U.S.C. § 2255 authorizes the Court to “vacate, set aside, or correct the 15 sentence” of a federal prisoner on “the ground that the sentence was imposed in violation 16 of the Constitution or laws of the United States, or that the court was without jurisdiction 17 to impose such sentence, or that the sentence was in excess of the maximum authorized 18 by law, or is otherwise subject to collateral attack.” 28 U.S.C. § 2255(a). To warrant 19 relief under § 2255, a prisoner must allege a constitutional or jurisdictional error, or a 20 “fundamental defect which inherently results in a complete miscarriage of justice [or] an 21 omission inconsistent with the rudimentary demands of fair procedure.” United States v.
22 Timmreck, 441 U.S. 780, 783 (1979) (quoting Hill v. United States, 368 U.S. 424, 428 23 (1962)).

24 III. DISCUSSION

25 Upon review of Petitioner’s motion and applicable law, the Court denies the 26 motion for three reasons: (1) retroactive application of Amendment 794 is limited to 27 claims raised on direct appeal; (2) Petitioner’s Amendment 794 claim is procedurally 28

1 defaulted; and (3) Petitioner has failed to state a cognizable claim under § 2255.
2 Moreover, even construing the motion as one for a sentence reduction under 18 U.S.C.
3 § 3582(c), Petitioner is not entitled to relief.

4 A. Retroactive Application of Amendment 794 is Limited to Cases on Direct 5 Appeal

6 In his § 2255 motion, Petitioner contends that Amendment 794 should be applied 7 retroactively to his sentence. (Dkt. No. 125 at 4.) In support of this claim, Petitioner 8 relies on Quintero-Leyva, in which a defendant, who was charged with importation of 9 methamphetamine and sentenced to 72 months in prison, appealed his conviction in light 10 of Amendment 794. 823 F.3d at 522. The Ninth Circuit held that, because it was 11 intended as a clarifying amendment, Amendment 794 applies retroactively to direct 12 appeals. Id. at 523; accord United States v. Sanders, 67 F.3d 855, 856 (9th Cir. 1995) 13 (“The Ninth Circuit has consistently stated that when an amendment is a clarification, 14 rather than an alteration, of existing law, then it should be used in interpreting the 15 provision in question retroactively.”); see also United States v. Christensen, 598 F.3d 16 1201, 1203 (9th Cir. 2010) (holding that an amendment limiting enhancements for unduly 17 influencing a minor to engage in prohibited sexual conduct where the “minor” is actually 18 an undercover officer applied retroactively where the defendant “timely appealed his 19 sentence”); United States v. Morgan, 376 F.3d 1002, 1007, 1013 (9th Cir. 2004) (holding 20 that an amendment excluding all interest from loss amount calculation was a clarifying 21 amendment, warranting its retroactive application to the defendant’s “timely appeals”).

22 This Court has found no case law, however, applying Amendment 794 23 retroactively in a § 2255 motion. In fact, when confronted with this very question, most 24 courts have refused to extend Quintero-Leyva to collateral attacks. See, e.g., Colhoff v.
25 United States, No. 5:16-CV-05081-KES, 2017 WL 1365119, at *6 (D.S.D. Jan. 27, 2017) 26 (“The Ninth Circuit’s holding in Quintero–Leyva is inapposite to [Petitioner’s] case—she 27 appears before the court on collateral review, not on direct appeal.”); United States v.

1 Sanchez, No. CR 14-078-ML, 2017 WL 394095, at *3 (D.R.I. Jan. 26, 2017) (finding that 2 defendant’s reliance on Quintero-Leyva was misplaced because the Ninth Circuit’s 3 holding “was specifically limited to direct appeals”); Johnson v. United States, No. 2:10-4 CR-185, 2016 WL 6084018, at *2 (S.D. Ohio Oct. 17, 2016) (discounting Petitioner’s 5 reliance on Quintero-Leyva because “that case did not hold that such relief is available on 6 collateral review, and other courts have concluded that it is not”).

7 The Court agrees with these courts that the distinction between a direct appeal and 8 a § 2255 motion is dispositive in determining whether Amendment 794 can apply 9 retroactively. The Supreme Court has “long and consistently affirmed that a collateral 10 challenge may not do service for an appeal.” United States v. Frady, 456 U.S. 152, 165, 11 167–68 (1982). Unlike an appeal, an action under § 2255 is “an independent and 12 collateral inquiry into the validity of the conviction” that occurs outside the direct review 13 process. United States v. Hayman, 342 U.S. 205, 222 (1952). Because Petitioner brings 14 this argument by way of collateral attack, he cannot obtain retroactive application of 15 Amendment 794 to his sentence.

16 B. Petitioner’s Amendment 794 Claim is Procedurally Defaulted

17 Even assuming this Court could apply Amendment 794 retroactively upon 18 Petitioner’s § 2255 motion, Petitioner has procedurally defaulted his argument by failing 19 to file a direct appeal of his sentence. Generally, defendants are precluded from bringing 20 claims under § 2255 that were not raised on direct appeal. United States v. Frady, 456 21 U.S. 152, 165–66 (1982). The Ninth Circuit, however, has made an exception to this rule 22 for claims of constitutional violations. United States v. Schlesinger, 49 F.3d 483, 485 23 (9th Cir. 1994). Thus, when a defendant fails to assert a nonconstitutional sentencing 24 error on direct appeal, she may not assert it in a § 2255 motion. Schlesinger, 49 F.3d at 25 485 (“[T]his court follows the rule that nonconstitutional sentencing errors that have not 26 been raised on direct appeal have been waived and generally may not be reviewed by 27 way of 28 U.S.C. § 2255.”); Evenstad v. United States, 978 F.2d 1154, 1158 (9th Cir.
28

1 1992) (“[Petitioner] makes a number of challenges to his sentencing not suggesting 2 constitutional error, but these are all barred because he did not appeal.”).

3 Here, despite being informed of his right to do so, Petitioner did not file a direct 4 appeal. (See Dkt. No. 125 at 2.) His argument seeking retroactive application of 5 Amendment 794 is not a constitutional claim. (See Doc. Nos. 125, 129.) By failing to 6 raise that argument during a direct appeal, Petitioner is barred from raising it here.
7 Accordingly, the Court need not reach the merits of Petitioner’s claim because it is 8 procedurally defaulted.

9 C. Petitioner’s Claim Fails to Meet the Requirements of § 2255

10 Even if the Court could ignore all of these procedural obstacles, a § 2255 motion is 11 not the proper vehicle for Petitioner to ask this Court for retroactive application of 12 Amendment 794. The grounds for which a defendant can raise a collateral attack under 13 § 2255 are far more limited than those available on direct appeal. United States v.
14 Addonizio, 442 U.S. 178, 184, n.11 (1979) (citing the need for finality and judicial 15 efficiency as reasons justifying § 2255’s limited scope). As such, § 2255 can provide 16 relief only where: (1) the sentence was imposed in violation of the Constitution or laws of 17 the United States; (2) the court did not have jurisdiction to impose the sentence; (3) the 18 sentence exceeded the maximum authorized by law; or (4) the sentence is otherwise 19 subject to collateral attack. 28 U.S.C. § 2255(a). The Supreme Court has interpreted the 20 fourth category to mean errors that constitute a “fundamental defect which inherently 21 results in a complete miscarriage of justice” or “an omission inconsistent with the 22 rudimentary demands of fair procedure.” Hill v. United States, 368 U.S. 424, 428 (1962); 23 see Peguero v. United States, 526 U.S. 23, 27–30 (1999).

24 Here, failure to apply Amendment 794 does not result in an illegal or 25 unconstitutional sentence. Nor does Petitioner claim any jurisdictional defects or an 26 excessive sentence. The only question left is whether failure to apply Amendment 794 27 retroactively results in a “complete miscarriage of justice.” Hill, 368 U.S. at 428. It does 28

1 not. In Hamilton v. United States, the Ninth Circuit held that the “district court’s failure 2 to apply a rule that had not yet been articulated at the time of sentencing” did not amount 3 to a fundamental defect resulting in a complete miscarriage of justice. 67 F.3d 761, 764 4 (9th Cir. 1995). Relying on this precedent, courts in this district have similarly refused to 5 provide relief in response to a § 2255 motion challenging the sentencing court’s failure to 6 apply guidelines not in effect at the time of sentencing. See, e.g., Stewart v. United 7 States, No. 12-CR-00461-H-1, 2017 WL 3174692, at *2 (S.D. Cal. July 26, 2017) (citing 8 Hamilton and noting that collateral review under § 2255 does not allow for review of all 9 claimed errors in sentencing).

10 Accordingly, Petitioner has failed to state a cognizable claim for relief under 11 § 2255.

12 D. Construed Under § 3582(c), Petitioner’s Claim Fails

13 Petitioner’s claims would have been more appropriately brought under 18 U.S.C.
14 § 3582(c) as a motion for modification of his sentence. Generally, courts have liberally 15 construed § 2255 motions brought by pro se litigants as § 3582 motions. See e.g., 16 Hamilton, 67 F.3d at 764 (“To do so is consistent with the duty of federal courts to 17 construe pro se pleadings liberally.”); United States v. Perez-Carrillo, No. 7:14CR00050, 18 2016 WL 4524246, at *1 (W.D. Va. Aug. 26, 2016) (“Because Perez-Carrillo is 19 proceeding without counsel, the court liberally construes her submission as a motion 20 seeking reduction under 18 U.S.C. § 3582(c).”). Petitioner here, however, was appointed 21 counsel. (Dkt. No. 128.) Instead of urging this Court to construe Petitioner’s § 2255
22 motion as a § 3582 motion, and instead of raising any constitutional issues, Petitioner’s 23 appointed counsel filed a Supplemental Motion in support of Petitioner’s § 2255 claim.
24 (Dkt. No. 129.)

25 Still, even if the Court construed Petitioner’s claim as a motion under § 3582(c), it 26 would fail because clarifying amendments do not apply retroactively in a motion under 27 § 3582. Generally, “a court may not modify a term of imprisonment once it has been 28

1 imposed.” 18 U.S.C. § 3582; see United States v. Rodriguez-Soriano, 855 F.3d 1040, 2 1042 (9th Cir. 2017). Section 3582(c)(2) provides an exception to that rule and allows a 3 court to reduce a defendant’s term of imprisonment based on a sentencing range that has 4 been subsequently lowered by the Sentencing Commission if the “reduction is consistent 5 with applicable policy statements by the Commission.” 18 U.S.C. § 3582(c)(2).
6 According to U.S.S.G. § 1B1.10, a court may reduce a defendant’s terms of 7 imprisonment under 18 U.S.C. § 3582(c) only when the “guideline range applicable to 8 that defendant has subsequently been lowered as a result of an amendment to the 9 Guidelines Manual listed in subsection (d) below.” U.S.S.G. § 1B1.10(a)(1) (emphasis 10 added); see also id. § 1B1.10(a)(2)(A) (“A reduction in the defendant’s term of 11 imprisonment is not consistent with this policy statement and therefore is not authorized 12 under 18 U.S.C. § 3582(c)(2) if . . . none of the amendments listed in subsection (d) is 13 applicable to the defendant . . .”).

14 Subsection (d) of § 1B1.10 does not list Amendment 794. See U.S.S.G.
15 § 1B1.10(d). Therefore, retroactive application of Amendment 794 upon a § 3582 16 motion is not permitted. Other district courts have agreed with this conclusion. See, e.g., 17 United States v. Yanez, No. 16-CV-1964-LAB, 2016 WL 4248541, at *1 (S.D. Cal. Aug.
18 11, 2016) (“Amendment 794 is not retroactive for purposes of a § 3582 motion.”); United 19 States v. Sprouse, No. 2:12-CR-122, 2017 WL 218376, at *2 (E.D. Tenn. Jan. 18, 2017)
20 (same); United States v. Collins, No. 2:14–CR–368, 2016 WL 6835063, at *1 (S.D. Tex.
21 Nov. 21, 2016) (same). Thus, even if Petitioner’s claim were construed as a § 3582(c) 22 motion, the Court would reject Petitioner’s request to reduce his sentence under 23 Amendment 794.

24 E. Certificate of Appealability

25 To appeal a district court’s denial of a § 2255 petition, a petitioner must obtain a 26 certificate of appealability. 28 U.S.C. § 2253(c)(1)(A). A district court may issue a 27 certificate of appealability “only if the applicant has made a substantial showing of the 28

1 denial of a constitutional right.” Id. § 2253(c)(2). To satisfy this standard, the petitioner 2 must show that “reasonable jurists would find the district court's assessment of the 3 constitutional claims debatable or wrong.” Slack v. McDaniel, 529 U.S. 473, 484 (2000).

4 For the reasons stated above, no reasonable jurist could conclude that Petitioner is 5 entitled to relief based on the arguments set forth in his § 2255 motion. Accordingly, the 6 Court declines to grant Petitioner a certificate of appealability.

7 F. CONCLUSION

8 For the foregoing reasons, the Court DENIES Petitioner’s § 2255 motion to 9 vacate, modify, or correct his sentence pursuant to Amendment 794. The Court declines 10 to issue a certificate of appealability.

11 IT IS SO ORDERED.
